Forecast For Northwest England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Sunday 19 Dec 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Becoming less murky in the south but greyer further north.

This Evening and Tonight:
Cloud slowly lifting through Sunday night, improving visibility at the surface but shrouding the higher ground. Clear spells initially remaining across Cumbria, with an early frost forming before cloud spreads over and rebounds temperatures a touch by dawn. Minimum temperature -3 deg C (27 deg F).

Monday:
Less murky in the south compared to late but greyer for northern areas with increased amounts of cloud. Staying dry throughout with some occasional brighter spells possible through the afternoon. Maximum temperature 7 deg C (45 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Staying settled for Tuesday and the start of Wednesday, though feeling colder with fog and frost in places overnight. Turning more unsettled and milder again later.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.